

BIBLICAL AND THEOLOGICAL STUDIES (BBST)

Biblical Studies Challenge Exams

Challenge exams are designed for those who have a working knowledge of the course content as a result of prior learning (attending a Christian high school, for example), but were not able to transfer that work to Biola. Informal, personal study normally will not prepare one adequately to pass these exams. Exams are available for BBST 209 (3 credits) and BBST 210 (3 credits). These exams may be taken only during the student's first year at Biola. Also, if the student has taken the course (or even a portion of it), the student is not eligible to take the corresponding challenge exam.

Exams are given in two parts, written and oral. Successful performance must be attained on both the written and oral portions in order for the student to receive credit for the challenge exam. Grades are recorded on a credit or no-credit basis only. No re-takes permitted.

A challenge exam is also available for first-year Greek—i.e., BLGR 101 (3 credits) and BLGR 102 (3 credits). See more details under “Greek (<https://catalog.biola.edu/tst/courses/BLGR/>).”

Senior level capstone seminar in which the student will search the Bible and the literature dealing with the topic(s) under discussion in the course leading to the discovery of means whereby the subject area may be integrated with biblical truth. Our task in this course is to wrestle with the intersections between art and theology within our contemporary cultural context. What does it look like for an artist or scholar to rigorously engage both Christian theology/practice, on the one hand, and contemporary art theory/practice, on the other? How might the two serve to enrich and deepen each other? What does it look like for a life to be both profoundly theological and profoundly artistic, and for these to form a unified whole? We will attempt to answer these questions through careful reading and writing, coupled with in-class lectures and discussion. We will investigate a range of critical and theological frameworks that offer possibilities for a more meaningful Christian engagement in the contemporary arts. Core Curriculum: Approved for Core - Biblical and Theological Studies. Grade Mode: A.

BBST 4656 - Integration Seminar: God and Math Credits 3

Senior level capstone seminar in which the student will search the Bible and the literature dealing with the topic(s) under discussion in the course leading to the discovery of means whereby the subject area may be integrated with biblical truth. Mathematics is one of the oldest disciplines of academic study and its history has intertwined with theological issues since the ancient Greeks. In this course, we will look at that history and the major philosophical and theological questions which have arisen in relation to math, and their answers. We will also look at how serious math is used in Christian practice today through biblical numerology, apologetics, and practical analogies. Practical analogies are ways of relating mathematical phenomena, such as infinity, dimensionality, and incompleteness, to God. Did God create mathematics or is it a part of His being? Regardless of which side of the issue students land on, they will be challenged to an expanded apprehension of God through the revelation of His nature through abstract mathematics exemplified in the physical world. Core Curriculum: Approved for Core - Biblical and Theological Studies.

Note(s): All math majors are strongly encouraged to take the course, as well as students interested in mathematics who have taken one semester of calculus or statistics. Grade Mode: A.

BBST 4658 - Integration Seminar: Redeeming Culture Through Music Credits 3

Senior level capstone seminar in which the student will search the Bible and the literature dealing with the topic(s) under discussion in the course leading to the discovery of means whereby the subject area may be integrated with biblical truth. Music has been described as “one of the most powerful media humans have at their disposal; how it mediates and what it mediates are notoriously hard to understand or explain.” (Begbie, Resounding Truth, 14). Like all other parts of creation, music bears the marks of the fall and is tainted by the messages, themes and character of the world. The task of theological integration is the enthroning Christ as King in every sphere of human endeavor and every aspect of the created order. The challenge for the Christian musician is to evaluate our contemporary culture in a theologically discerning way and to express the depth and breadth of God’s truth through the medium of music. In this course, students will learn to look at the contemporary music world, first as artists who evaluate their culture as trained experts in their field of study and, second, as theologians who evaluate their culture and express their faith in a way that resonates with the expressed truth of God’s Word. Students will explore theological themes appropriate to their musical expression and also perform a work that declares God’s truth through their musical expression.
